Tufts Geology Head To Give Lecture on Arctic and Antarctic

"Beyond the Arctic and Antarctic Circles—to the Ends of the World," a lecture celebrating the international geo-physical year, will be given in the College auditorium at 8:15 p.m. on Thursday, by Dr. Robert Nichols.

The lecture is primarily a recounting of a 90-day geologic sledge trip which Dr. Nichols completed with one companion. Beautifully illustrated with colored slides, it tells of life in a barren world where temperatures often skidded to 45 degrees below zero.

Dr. Nichols is chairman of the geology department at Tufts University. He has been on the Tufts faculty since 1936.

Dr. Nichols was chief natural scientist of the 1946-48 Finn Ronne expedition which spent 18 months in the Antarctic, where he did oceanographic and geologic work in unexplored areas. In 1949 he made scientific studies of Andean glaciers in Patagonia, and in the summer of 1948 he was geologist with the U. S. Navy's Task Force 80 in the Arctic. In 1953 he was leader of the U. S. Army expedition to Northwest Greenland.

Winners Are Announced

From the class of 1958, the winners are: first, David A. Smith; second, Laurence W. Muench; third, Nicholas Zessoules. From the class of 1959, the winners are: first, John S. Foster; second, George A. Anderson; tie for third, Lloyd Frauenglass and Gintas Simonaitis.

Source of Awards

These prizes are from the income of a fund established by Alumni authorities of a local chapter (no longer active) of the Phi Delta Fraternity. They are given for excellence in regular course work and are awarded mainly on the results of the final examinations which are common to all sections of the same course. Both the examinations given at the end of the Trinity Term are used for the purpose, but grades earned on those given at the end of the Trinity Term are weighted more heavily in determining

Broadcasting To Be Resumed by WRTC

WRTC, the campus radio station, expects to resume broadcasting operations on frequency modulation by February 15. The station, with a power of 250 watts, will be operating at 89.3 megacycles.

In an interview with the TRIPOD, Station Manager, Stephen N. Bowen, said, "the opening of this radio station will mark a milestone in radio in this area. It will be the first educational station to serve Greater Hartford."

According to Bowen, the past months have been spent preparing the necessary forms, maps and exhibits required by the Federal Communications Commission for application.

Preliminary program schedules call for a 13-hour broadcast day Sunday through Friday with a 14-hour schedule on Saturday. Programs will vary from classical music, debates, round-table discussions between faculty and students to popular music and jazz.

In concluding the interview, Bowen said, "we have worked long and hard towards achieving this goal. It is our hope that through the educational radio station Trinity College will soon have, the Hartford public will gain new insight into the College by hearing it in action."

U.S. Foreign Policy Needs Reappraisal Says Dr. Perkins

By R. WINSLOW

Dexter Perkins, Professor of American Civilization at Cornell University and the 1956 Mead Lecturer, delivered a statement of the nation's foreign policy of the last ten years, coupled with a survey of significant world events on December 14.

The professor had an easy interesting manner, which pleased his audience more than his topic. Seldom, until near the conclusion of the lecture, did Perkins rise above the history of the topic.

He emphasized that United States aid to Europe to resist Communism was due to our own desire for security. We should not expect thanks for what we have done.

Brilliantly conceived by the bipartisan team of Truman, Marshall and Vandenburg, the Truman doctrine has, according to Perkins, suffered lately from differences among the Allies toward the concept of a Russian menace, along with the inept handling of our foreign policy by Secretary of State Dulles.

Professor Perkins is hopeful about the present, dismal state of things and optimistically, perhaps ironically, cited the maxim, "When things get worse enough, they are bound to improve." He believes that Eisenhower is the one man who can restore vitality to our foreign policy. Because of

Memorial Donation for TRIPOD Offices in the Student Union Announced

A $33,000 gift has been donated to the Program of Progress for the purpose of naming, building and furnishing the Tripod offices in the Student Union, it was announced today by Mr. Albert Holland.

The funds were donated by Mr. Francis Boyer, President of Smith Kline and French Laboratories, in memory of his son John F. Boyer, '53 of Ardmore, Pennsylvania, who was killed in an auto crash in March 1954. John Boyer was an Associate Editor of the Tripod, and author of the weekly column The Fetid Air.

$30,000 of the donation will be used to build the three-room Tripod offices, and $3,000 will completely furnish them with typewriters, filing cabinets, desks, fluorescent lights and long composing tables.

The entire office will cover six

Boyer Described As Talented Arts Man

The editorial column of the Tripod carried the following story after the death of John F. Boyer in March 1954. Written by Editor Dick Hirsch, '54, it tells the complete story of John F. Boyer, his devotion to the Arts and to Trinity. It is fitting that everyone realize the deep significance with which the TRIPOD offices are donated to the Student Union.

John F. Boyer, '53

Death struck very close to the Tripod Office last Monday as word reached the campus of the death of John F. Boyer.

After entering Trinity with the class of 1953, he left school after the completion of his freshman year, and served two years on active duty with the Army. He returned to College in September of 1952.

Throughout his college career Jack Boyer took an avid interest in extra-curricular activities. When he left school in February (1954) he was an Editorial Associate of the Tripod, and the author of the weekly column The Fetid Air. His poetry and short stories frequently appeared in The Review, and he was a member of the Editorial Board of that publication. He was the manager of the lacrosse team, and a member of the Delta Psi fraternity. A prolific writer, in addition to his contributions to campus publications, he had published professionally several short stories.

Perhaps more than anything else, Jack Boyer had a genuine fondness for his College. Many of his columns were devoted to events on campus, and, although he poked fun at what he felt were inadequacies, this certainly showed his concern about Trinity. When circumstances were such that he felt he should transfer this year, it was with genuine regret that he told us of his plans.

As the news of his sudden death spread over the campus Monday, all who knew him were deeply saddened. For those of us who had worked so closely with him on this newspaper, it was even a harder blow. It is with more than deepest regret that we record the most untimely death of Jack Boyer. One of our comrades in arms, who wielded the pen with much more efficacy than we could ever do is gone, and his loss is felt by all of us.

THIS Contributions Reach $2,000 Mark

Contributions to the Trinity College Hungarian Interest Scholarship have reached $2,173.70 and continue to pour in, announced chairman Pete Lowenstein, '58.

Lowenstein said definite steps are being taken to locate a suitable student, to begin classes next September. The money raised thus far will enable a student to attend Trinity for a year and a half. Lowenstein said the drive will continue until the remainder of the $6,500 goal is raised for the proposed four year, all-expense paid scholarship.

The World University Service and the International Rescue Committee are both assisting in the selection of the student, Lowenstein said.

A letter from Tracy S. Vorhees, Eisenhower's special appointee, in charge of the Hungarian Refugee problem, sent a letter to White House stationery, to Lowenstein, thanking the THIS fund committee for their work.

REGISTRATION

Registration will be held on Tuesday, January 29, 1957, in Alumni Hall. Announcement of courses for the Trinity Term will be distributed in the Dean's Office on Friday, January 11.

WE ARE GREATLY HONORED

The Tripod is indebted to Mr. Francis Boyer for his generous contribution to the newspaper and to the College. Tripod staff members will always remember the name and reputation of John F. Boyer, his son.

We are honored to be among the first undergraduate activities to receive such a thoughtful endowment; and indeed we are honored.

New Tripod offices in the Student Union have greater significance to us than most students and faculty may realize. The Tripod has become almost a way of life to the editors. We believe that it is the most important activity we can participate in at Trinity, next to our studies.

It is important because of the natural contributions of a newspaper, and important because of the valuable journalistic training we receive from the many hours spent in lower Goodwin. We believe that the Tripod is the most integral student activity at College, and we are proud to be its editors; and even more proud that Mr. Boyer has seen fit to honor this necessary organization with the facilities it has long needed.

THE RUSSIANS ARE COMING: TO ARMS

With the passing of the American Christmas and all of the many blessings each of us realized safe in our own homes, we cannot help but let our attention be drawn from before the heat of the roaring Yule log to the far off border between Austria and Hungary.

On this border a Christmas Pageant of more significance and more splendor than that which any of our American Christmases could possibly have had was taking place.

More than likely none of us realize the keen drama of thousands of Hungarians fleeing their native lands in the midst of winter, leaving behind them loved ones, family and friends. This is the price of freedom. Many have already paid the supreme price, more are certain to.

We can and we must do something to help these freedom-seeking Hungarians. There are few channels of opportunity left open to us as college students. There is, however, one method open, and that is through the support of T.H.I.S.

Having already raised $2,000, and in need of $6,000 for three years' education of a Hungarian student, we cannot help but feel that giving anything, money or time is a responsibility of the students.

The Hungarian crisis is practically upon our doorstep; closer than we realize. It behooves each of us to tear ourselves away from studies and support T.H.I.S., either by offering our time or our dollars to a worthy cause.

We know that Peter Lowenstein would be glad to organize any more canvassers who offered their services. Perhaps the freshmen, who are so adapt at organizing parties and banquets would like to undertake something worthwhile, and descend upon the community en masse? Why not? If the Sophomore Dining Club can run a blood drive, it should be no trouble for the Class of 1960 to collect $4,000 more dollars to bring a courageous Hungarian student to Trinity.

WE ARE SORRY

Once again the problem of student apathy struck home when the Jesters presented their second production of the year. Despite the fact the Jesters have been long recognized as one of the College's most able and ambitious groups, the attendance at "For the Time Being," was pitifully small.

It is difficult to imagine that the entire College population of nearly seven-hundred deserted the campus this past weekend, what with the approaching examination period.

The Jesters, talented and imaginative, should not be denied an audience. The Tripod commends them and hopes that their next "reading" will be given at a more convenient time, better to suit student apathy.

Orders will be taken on Friday, January 11, for official college rings. Campus representative, Steve Bowen, will be in Seabury Lounge from 11 o'clock until 1:30 P.M. Prices of the rings range from $16.00 to $20.00. Rings will be delivered on campus during April. THIS WILL BE THE ONLY OPPORTUNITY TO OBTAIN YOUR RING AND HAVE DELIVERY THIS SCHOOL YEAR!

Life at Trinity College Is Compared to That at Oxford

(Editor's Note: The following letter was written by David Jones, a graduate of Oxford University, after he received the college brochure "Why Trinity", forwarded to him by a friend of the college.)

Mother has passed on to me the booklets about Trinity College. It was kind of you to think of sending them to me.

Trinity Compares To Oxford

I believe you would like to hear something about the way in which Trinity compares with Oxford. This is quite an undertaking, but I am very interested to have a try because the first thing that struck me from the booklets you sent was that Trinity bears a quite extraordinary close resemblance to my own College at Oxford, Keble College. The window arches, the lines of contrasting colour in the brickwork, the general masses and proportions of the building, even the line of trees outside are quite remarkably similar. They are even of much the same period, because Keble was built in 1875.

On the other hand, this is probably where resemblance ceases, though I don't know enough about University life in Canada or the U.S.A. to be sure of my ground here. To begin with, Keble is younger by several hundred years than any other Oxford College (not counting Niffield College, which is rather a special postgraduate institution) and is the only one to be built in red brick. All the rest are in the peculiarly lovely grey-gold stone for which Oxford is famous.

University Houses 25 Colleges

In general, anyway, I imagine Trinity should be compared with Oxford University as a whole, not with any individual college. This is sometimes a difficult point to explain; visitors ask to be shown "the University" and it doesn't exist as such. There are various University offices, all very old buildings, but the University in essence consists of about 25 separate colleges, scattered throughout the city of Oxford, and more or less composing the central area of the city. The University has existed as such since at least 1150 A.D. and some of the individual colleges existed as "Halls" long before that.

Perhaps the most striking thing to visitors is that some of the present buildings have been in continuous use for the same purposes for about 700 years. From one or two points of view, the famous and beautiful High Street still looks, traffic apart, exactly the same as it did at least 400 years ago — all the buildings are still there.

Students Work in Other Colleges

The students all live in their colleges, though there are now so many — about 7,500 altogether — that for at least part of their University career they may have to live in College lodgings in the City. For the most part, however, they don't work in their colleges except in so far as they work in their own rooms. They go to lectures wherever the man they want to listen to is talking — usually in that man's own college — or they work in various libraries scattered throughout Oxford, either in their own buildings or in the Colleges. Scientists, like me, spend most of their life in their laboratories, which have an area of their own near the University Parks — which, incidentally, contain one of the loveliest cricket grounds in England.

The two important things are that, wherever you work, you go back home to live and eat with the other members of the college who may be studying — "reading" we call it — any subject under the sun, and that you have your own "tutor", who may or may not be in your own college, who looks after you throughout your undergraduate life. You see him whenever you want, usually at least once a week, calling on him (dressed in your gown, of course,) in his rooms to discuss your work, the lectures you are attending, the books you should read, or to read him the essay he told you to write about something or other. He sees only a very few pupils at once — sometimes just one at a time — and has only twenty or so altogether, sometimes less. He is important because you have no other guide to how you are getting on; you take no examinations, as a rule, from the day you enter till the time of your final degree exam three years later. I am greatly impressed, myself, with the value of the degree of freedom this gives to students; they can, by and large, manage their own lives how they like.

All this may cover the more important things, but it's the lesser things one remembers with the greatest affection: long summer afternoons on the green and the river Cherwell; conversations with groups of friends in college in the small hours of the morning, or the proceedings of the hundreds of clubs, covering everything from games or films or theatre to Sanskrit, Chinese History or rug-making.

Jesters Stage Production of Auden's Christmas Oratorio in College Chapel

(From the Hartford Courant)

The Jesters of Trinity College presented a fine dramatic reading of Auden's Christmas oratorio, "For the Time Being," Saturday in the Chapel. They are to be commended both for their handling of the oratorio and for their choice of the work.

Considered as a poem, it is provocative, reflecting contemporary and highly temporal attitudes toward the events surrounding the birth of Christ in contemporary idiom.

Well Staged

The production was well staged, exciting both for eye and ear. The staging was well adapted to the limitations imposed by the Chapel, and the magnificent building contributed much to the visual effect. Unfortunately, it was sometimes difficult to hear some of the smaller voices, which may have come through on a true stage.

The most effective reading voices were those of Remington Rose, narrator and co-director, and Peter Vaughn as Herod, a full role which he delivered authoritatively.

The production was considerably enhanced by musical interludes between the eight scenes. Assisting were Dwight Oarr playing the organ of the Chapel and the harpsicord, and Henry Hood and Rolfe Lawson giving the recorder selections. The lullaby was sung by the Freshman Octet, "The Chanticleers."

Kudos must go to a superlative voice—that of James Flannery, a junior, who sang the incredibly lovely solo "Cherry Tree Carol."

Also included in the cast were Amelia Silvestri, Holly Stevens, Robert Perce, Lee Kalcherim, Gordon Scott, Lamont Thomas, Mary Jane Hansen, William Learnard, Peter Strasser, Mark Healy, Sage Swanson, Anne Morris, Bryan Bunch, Robert Mosko, Charles Hawes and Rolfe Lawson, co-director.

Yale Views Insurance Industry Publishes "Insurance World, 1957"

Junior Prom Set for Feb. 22 Says '58 Pres.

Junior Class President Jack Thompson announced that the Junior Prom will be held as part of a major party weekend on Friday, February 22, from 9 to 1 at the Hartford Club.

The orchestra, from New Haven, will be that of Eddie Wittstein, regarded by many as "The Grand Old Man" of New England popular music. There will be no corkage fee and tickets will be on sale after exams. As usual, tickets will be on a first serve basis.

In addition, an all-school jazz concert will be held in Hamlin between 4:00 and 5:30 on Saturday afternoon.

The Junior Prom Committee, comprised of representatives of all social organization, includes: Saunders, Garrett, See, Rose, Bockius, Moran, Lorson, Polstein, Gleason, Renelt and Barrett.

The special intermission entertainment committee consists of Rose, Lawson and Kury.

Gleason, Kay, Ferrucci are the orchestra committee. See and McDonald will be in charge of the tickets.

Theme and Decorations are being planned by Lorson. Publicity committee consists of Saunders, Renelt and Werner. Polstein and Garrett are in charge of faculty relations.

A group of Yale students has just completed a highly-profitable business operation which should make the commercial publishing world sit up and take notice.

$115,000 in Advertising

These students have published 300,000 copies of a two-volume slick-paper magazine, "Insurance World 1957," which contains more than $115,000 worth of advertising.

Presents Analysis of Insurance

Besides being a fabulous business proposition, the magazine has a serious purpose. It represents an attempt to present a complete and objective analysis of the American insurance industry. It is being distributed free to 300,000 undergraduates of more than 100 colleges and universities throughout the United States and Canada.

To be Nationally Distributed

The Yale students have budgeted $25,000 just to cover the cost of distribution. Many of the copies will be mailed directly to American college students. Other copies will be distributed by student agents at the various schools. The two-volume magazine with a total of 224 pages is published by the Yale Daily News.

Published in Two Editions

The scope of this venture is indicated by the fact that the magazine is being published in two editions, one for the East and the other for the West. While the copy will be the same, the advertising in the two editions will be different since it is geared to the locale where it will be distributed.

Some of the nation's top insurance executives have contributed articles—for which they received no fee—to the publication. Among these authors are: Frederic W. Ecker, President of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company; Devereux Josephs, Chairman of the Board of the New York Life Insurance Company, and Carroll N. Shanks, President of the Prudential Life Insurance Company of America.

Co-Captain Kev Logan executes the butterfly stroke in pre-vacation meet against Coast Guard in New London. This Saturday Art Christ's crew faces Springfield, termed by the Trin coach as "probably the toughest club in the East." The meet will begin at 2:30 in Trowbridge Memorial Pool.

Tankers to Swim Springfield After 43-43 Tie with Academy

By LARRY MUENCH

TRINITY VARSITY TANKERS are preparing for a tough meet with Springfield here Saturday at 2:30, after tying a determined Coast Guard squad 43-43 in New London just before the holidays.

Although Springfield has suffered heavy losses from the team that won last year's meet in the last relay, they are strong where Trinity is strong, with Clark in the freestyle sprints, McDonald in the breaststroke, and distance freestyle posing the chief threats.

Wins Relay

In the Coast Guard meet Dec. 12, Trinity led off by winning the medley relay, followed by Barry Schechtman and Larry Muench in the 220-yd. freestyle and Walt Shannon and Dave Clark in the 50-yd. freestyle placing first and third, respectively. Rallying, Coast Guard managed to touch out Kev Logan in the 100-yd. butterfly and place two men ahead of Don Taylor in the diving.

Tying it up, they took first and third in the 100-yd. freestyle when Shannon missed a turn, and went ahead 31-30 with a first in the 200-yd. backstroke over Pete Onderdonk and Phil Jacklin, who placed second and third, respectively. Coming back strong, Muench and Schechtman churned in first and second in the 440-yd. freestyle, and Logan won the 200-yd. breaststroke. The meet ended in a tie when Trinity lost the final relay.

Bantam Cagers Still Attempt To Halt Slide

By BILL MCGILL

"THE KIDS are really down and I can't seem to get them up." These words of Ray Oosting's tell a part of the long dismal story that is Trinity basketball, '56-'57 edition. As the Hilltoppers prepare to wind up the first half of the season tonight and Saturday before the mid-year break, the end of the drought is not yet in sight.

This evening in the distant climes of Schenectady, N. Y., the Bantams are taking on a tall Union squad that has rumbled through seven games without a loss. Saturday they will play host to a Tufts team which, while having tasted defeat, was good enough to dump Boston College, conquerors of UConn.

Streak At Seven

For those who haven't taken time to notice, the string has now been run out to seven losses without a stain of victory. Just before the Christmas recess, Friday, Dec. 14th, Middlebury's Panthers pulled out a 74-73 overtime decision after trailing most of the way. The Bantams had a 37-36 halftime advantage and with 10 minutes past in the final half had moved to 53-46 bulge. But Ted Mooney's jumper knotted the count with 14 seconds to go. In the overtime, the Bantams again moved in front, but lost when a last-second free-throw by Jack McGowan missed. The junior forward, playing his first contest, played an outstanding game, however, sinking four baskets and 14 charity tosses for 22 points. Second high was Bob Godfrey with 17. Except for this pair nobody scored on a free throw for the losers.

On January 1 and 2 the Bantams journeyed to Durham, N. H., for a holiday tournament and returned minus a few more feathers. In their opener they led 47-35 at the half and then collapsed to lose again by the 74-73 count. In one two-minute span in the closing moments the lead changed hands five times, but with 8 seconds to go Bob Bettencourt hit a free throw and that was that. McGowan was again high man with 18 followed by Ed Anderson 13, and Jim Canivan 12.

Collapse

In the last game the second half collapse was even more frightening. Trailing only 37-36 at the half, the Bantams scraped up only 17 second half points as Bowdoin sank them 75-53. Jay Dwyer and Bob Godfrey tallied 14 and 11 points, respectively, to head the meager scoring column.

Raynard, Duff, Shea Named All-American

Doug Raynard—All-American soccer player from Wethersfield.

Doug Selected On First Team Of Boot Squad

SENIOR CO-CAPTAINS and an outstanding sophomore from Trinity's first undefeated, untied soccer team were vaulted into the national limelight today.

Doug Raynard, from Wethersfield, was named to the starting center position on the All-American team picked by the National Soccer Coaches Association. Don Duff from Thomaston received honorable mention, as did soph Brendan Shea, who lives in Manchester.

Dath Enthusiastic

Coach Roy Dath was especially enthusiastic about the selection of Shea, as it is unusual for a sophomore to receive the honor.

Raynard is generally considered one of the finest all-around soccer players ever developed by Dath. He scored 12 goals this season, just one short of the Trin record, and was credited with numerous assists. His campus activities include the Senate, the Medusa, "Who's Who," and presidency of Sigma Nu.

Honorable Mention

Duff's honorable mention follows his selection to the first team of the NEISL earlier this year. The senior class president is a member of the Medusa, a cadet major in the AF-ROTC, and vice-president of Delta Phi.

A member of Alpha Chi Rho, Shea participated in freshman basketball and baseball last year.

Other members of the first All-American first team are Michael Easterling, Wheaton; Paul Coward, Purdue; William Hughes, Brockport; Thomas Colmey, Duke; Henry Litchfuss, Towson; Raymond Wilson, Westchester; Kenneth Lindfors, Oberlin; Michael Cooke, Yale; and Anthony Washofsky and Oswalk Jethon, Drexel.

Squash Outfit Face Wes After 9-0 Williams Loss

HUNTING their first win of the season, the varsity squashsters met Wesleyan this afternoon on the Trinity courts.

The Bantams lost their first match Saturday 9-0 to a superior, more experienced Williams team. Comprising the Trinity offense in the Williams and Wesleyan matches were Brooks Harlow, captain Bernie Moran, Pete Dunning, Dan Kenefick, Nelson Holland, John Allen, Alex Fava, Asheton Toland and Howdy McIlvaine.

After exams the squad will face such teams as Pittsburg, Yale and Army.

Their freshman counterparts also faced Wesleyan this afternoon in the initial meet of the season. They'll play Williston in an away match Saturday.

"The weight I gain just gets me down.
Each bite, each drop of this or that,
Immediately turns to fat.
Some girls, I note, can eat and eat
And yet they still look trim and neat.
To aggravate the situation
I much dislike my fat's location.
I wouldn't so much want to change me,
If only I could rearrange me."
